PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

I run creative for multiple brands at once, and I make the work myself. Right now at Crevia I handle graphics, video, product imagery, social and websites across Mymy, Al Yamin, Klay Consultants and ATK - which is the same job as running marketing for a growing food brand, only spread across five clients instead of focused on one I actually care about.

Before that: six years of product and brand design, including building Uncover from logo to launch and carrying it through website and app. Seven years art directing, shooting and editing alongside it - freelance ad creative for Hero, Suzuki, Red Bull, Monster and Trojan.

So you get strategy and the assets from one person. The reels, the stills, the launch campaign for a new outlet - shot, cut and posted in-house, in the same week, without an agency retainer.

And I'm not faking the product interest. I brew, I've worked through most of Delhi NCR's cafes as a paying customer with opinions, and I've worked on a coffee plantation in Kerala. I've seen the bean before it was a menu item.

CORE SKILLS

Marketing & Strategy: Social media strategy, end-to-end campaign planning, brand collaborations, influencer and creator partnerships, B2B and corporate tie-ups, outlet-launch marketing, content calendars

Brand: Identity from scratch, logo and visual systems, packaging and collateral, brand guidelines, tone of voice, holding a look together as a chain adds outlets

Content Production: Food and beverage photography, product imagery, video direction and editing, motion graphics, short-form and reels, art direction on set, colour and finish

Coffee & Floor: Manual brewing, cafe literacy across Delhi NCR, origin-side time on a Kerala coffee plantation, comfortable working a busy floor

WHAT I'D BRING TO NUBO

- Strategy and the assets, from one person. Most marketing hires need a photographer, an editor and a designer behind them to ship anything. I am those three. Shoot day, edit, grade, post - same week, in-house.
- A brand that survives new outlets. I build identity systems meant to hold as things scale. Galleria, Hauz Khas and the new Delhi outlets is exactly that problem - location three is where most food brands start looking like three different companies.

- Real multi-brand throughput. At Crevia I keep five brands moving at once on live deadlines. Volume and consistency under pressure is the actual job, and I already do it.
- Product knowledge that isn't borrowed. I brew, I've taken notes in a lot of cafes, and I've worked a Kerala coffee plantation. I can shoot and write the food and coffee story without being handed talking points - and I'll know when a menu claim isn't true.
- Delhi NCR based, already here. Opening content has to be shot on site on the day. That only works with someone local, and I am.
- Willing to stand behind the counter. If a floor or barista seat is the one actually open, I'll take it and learn the bar properly. I'd rather be inside a brand I like than pitch at it from outside.
